

Society Studies Fashions With After-Easter Festivities In View

MISS MARGARET FORBES.

MISS MAY McCOSKY.

Changes In Fashions Keep Society on the Qui Vive

Just when the first robins had made their appearance and the housewives were beginning to see visions of early radishes and lettuce—possibly onions—while the spring port had put on a soulful expression and turned his eye in readiness for the annual ode to spring, and the matrons and maids were wearing over fashion magazines and the after-Easter weddings and social affairs in mind, along comes the weatherman to blight their hopes with wintry blasts and flurries of snow.

The spring port was interrupted right in the midst of his ode to spring and the matrons and maids lost interest in the fashion magazines. For who could retain the picture in the mind's eye of tulips and orange blossoms while shivering in winter furs or contending for the place of honor near the radiator.

The fashions are changing so rapidly of late that it is most discouraging. No sooner has a pump purchased what is represented to her as the very latest thing in spring pumps made on an aristocratic slender last, than she finds they are not being worn in Paris, that the correct thing is an extremely short-vamped toe with a rounded toe quite
